Q: I have crowns on my front teeth that are older and have black lines at the gum and are not pretty anymore. How can I make sure my new ones will look good?

A: In the past, crowns needed metal under the porcelain for strength. What you are seeing is either the metal showing after years of wear or cavity decay eating your teeth away.

Today, I can replace those with all porcelain crowns that requires no metal and are strong. No more black line and they are beautiful.

I also make trial temporary crowns during the replacement process that my patients can wear home. These trial crowns can be adjusted for shape, size and color in order to get the perfect match with porcelain.
