Q: My wife tells me that I have bad breath. What brand of mouthwash is best for this problem?

A: Bad breath can be an embarrassing subject to discuss, but it also can be a sign of something more serious. Chronic bad breath is usually not diet related and mouthwashes are not effective.

Oral conditions like gum disease, decay and leaking fillings are a breeding ground for sulfur producing bacteria. When these bacteria accumulate in large numbers, the odor can be overwhelming. It is easy for me to determine if these conditions exist.

Medical conditions like uncontrolled diabetes and acid reflux can also cause bad breath.

Start with a visit to the dentist. You and your wife will be glad you did.
