Q: My lower denture is loose and always has been. I'm wearing a pound of Poligrip that doesn't really help. Half the time I leave them out and it's driving my wife crazy. What can I do?

A: I feel your pain. Many, many people have a similar problem with their lower dentures. For most people the upper will function okay, but the lower is a struggle.

Ask The Dentist

The lower jaw moves, the tongue is in the way and the lower must fit around all of this movement.

The one and only way to fix this and fix it for good is to anchor that lower denture to something that stays with the lower jaw when it moves. And today there is something that is easy, quick and relatively inexpensive.

Mini-implants!

Hallelujah!

I personally have helped dozens of patients with these. They thank me every time I see them..... and so do their wives.
