

Dr. Ron Dillow

Q: My dentist retired and I am looking for a new dentist. What is the best way to find a good dentist?

A: Finding the dentist that is right for you is an important decision. One good way is to ask trusted friends, family members and co-workers who they go to. This will narrow your search.

Ask The Dentist

When you call the office does the person answering seem friendly and caring? Your first impression is usually right.

Is the office clean? Is the staff friendly and caring? If you have questions, are they answered thoroughly? Are you treated like a person, rather than a number? How you are treated by the staff and the dentist during the first visit is usually an indication of how your other visits will go.
