Q: My gum between two teeth gets sore and bleeds sometimes. Am I not brushing hard enough?

A: Brushing and flossing is a good start to keep your gums and teeth healthy. The discomfort and swelling is a sign that something else is going on despite your best efforts.

A small gap between teeth can let food and plaque get stuck causing irritation. If the teeth have fillings in them, they could be leaking or have a ledge under the gum causing bacteria to accumulate.

Any area of the mouth that bleeds is not healthy and should be checked thoroughly before the symptoms worsen. These type of problems are usually easy to correct.
