

Dr. Ron Dillow

Q: I went to a new dentist recently and was told I had several teeth with deep decay requiring a lot of treatment. Everything feels great in my mouth. How can that be?

A: It sounds to me like you have some doubts that these conditions exist. Over the years I have treated many patients who had absolutely no symptoms with teeth that had problems.

Ask The Dentist

They had severe decay or gum related problems that were detected with advanced diagnostics, like the intraoral camera or digital xrays.

Many times this comes down to a matter of trust with the dentist or the office staff. If you do not trust what you have been told, get a second opinion. If deep decay exists it is only a matter of time before you will start having problems and it may be too late to save the teeth.

Here at Todays Dental Care the focus is on you, your health and your comfort. If you are having dental problems or questions, please call 345-8333 now to receive a complimentary consultation. You may also direct your questions to Dr. Dillow at drdillow@todaysdentalcare.net or view our article archive at www.todaysdentalcare.net

todaysdentalcare.net

PAID ADVERTISEMENT