

Dr. Ron Dillow

Q: I have crooked front teeth and I do not want to go through braces. What can I do to make them look better?

A: Today there are several options to improve this situation. Clear aligner therapy, such as Invisalign, can straighten teeth over a period of months without metal wires.

Selective recontouring and bonding is very conservative and can usually be done in one visit, many times without the use of anesthetic. This is good for mild to moderately crooked teeth.

Total or partial coverage of the teeth with porcelain usually takes 2-3 visits and is good if more than four teeth are involved and a color change is desired.
